Out of 10 participating pizza restaurants at last Tuesday's "Best of Bristol" pizza event, Chunky Tomato Pizzeria came out on top. The Best of Bristol contest was organized by the Bristol Eastern High School Project Graduation team, as a fundraising event for the all-night graduation party.

Erin Londen, a member of the Project Graduation team, said close to 600 people attended the event, which ended up raising over $3,000 for the graduation party.

"It ended up being very successful," Londen said.

This was the first time Bristol Eastern Project Graduation had a contest like "Best of Bristol," which proved to be a success. Ten Bristol restaurants participated in the event, and each guest paid $5, and went to each table, tried a piece of a cheese pizza, and voted on their favorite.

"The voting came really close," Londen said, adding that the Project Graduation members wanted to thank the guests and the restaurants for their support.

Newly opened San Gennaro came in second place, and LJ's Pizza came in third.

We're fighting kidney cancer with robotics

The Hospital of Central Connecticut is using advanced robotic surgery to treat kidney cancer, as well as non-cancerous kidney disorders including urinary blockages. The robot's tiny little tools allow our highly experienced surgeons to make the smallest possible incisions, and to more easily access difficult-to-reach areas. Patients may recover faster, have fewer side effects, and experience less pain and scarring.
